Government usually sanction such deputations with retention of liens, when the services of the officers can be spared without prejudice to the work in the department.

The lien is retained because their services were lent by the Government itself. The officer is entitled to resume the same position as that in which he left it. His foreign service counts towards increments.

The considerations are that they could be taken back when their employers do not want their services or when the officers themselves opt to revert.

The Government of India requested for the loan of services of Dr. B. Ananthaswamy Rao for the post of Deputy-Director, Malaria Institute of India, Delhi. As this is a post carrying more remuneration and responsibilities with it, Government did not wish to interfere with the prospect of the officers. Further it is an honour to the State services that one of their officers should be selected for a high place in Government of India service.
